

2 Killed In Auto Crash Near Orland

Two Brothers From Glenco Crushed to Death When Car Is Mysteriously Ditched

Keane avenue, a mile north of Orland Park was the scene of a fatal auto accident in which two brothers were killed Memorial Day evening. The accident occurred about six o'clock.

Passing autoists saw an overturned car lying in the ditch and upon investigation found one man crushed to death and the second one fatally injured. He was rushed to the Burnside hospital where he died an hour later without regaining consciousness.

Orville Schmadelke of Orland assisted in extricating the men from the wreck. No one witnessed the accident and it is not known how it occurred. There is a defect in the pavement at this point and it is thought that the car may have been going at high speed and when it hit the defect the car was ditched.

The men were identified by cards and letters found on them. They were brothers. Their names were Wendelin and Mike Sochar, aged 30 and 28 years. Their home was in Glenco where the oldest brother was employed as a gardener.

The bodies were taken to the Adler & Funk Funeral Home in Oak Forest where the inquest was held Tuesday.

People in this section feel that the state should look after this pavement before any more fatal accidents occur.

Hundreds Attend Double Celebration At Frankfort

Frankfort outdid herself Monday when a full day's celebration was staged. In the afternoon the annual Memorial Day exercises and parade were held and in the evening a Washington Bi-Centennial program was carried out in the church parlors of the St. Peter Evangelical church. Both celebrations were huge successes and were very largely attended.

The services at the Pleasant Hill cemetery were indeed very impressive and will long be remembered. The addresses by Rev. G. S. Gerhold and the prayer by Rev. Samuel Weishaar were such that reached the hearts of all present.

At the school grounds the program was as follows:

Band and audience playing and singing "America."

Song and flag drill by school children.

Reading by Lois Krause

Songs by choirs of both churches

Male chorus.

Address by Rev. E. E. Hastings.

His subject was Memorial Day and Washington and his masterful manner of presenting his topic held the interest of all.

The flag drill was excellent and showed the result of good training by the teachers.

The reading by Lois Krause was nicely rendered.

The male chorus made a hit and responded to an encore with "The Vacant Chair."

The Ashlar band of Chicago Heights furnished the music.

The exercises closed with the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner."

Supper was served in the church parlors. Following this the Washington Bi-Centennial program was presented. Two plays were given "For Love of Country", and "All About Washington". The double celebration was very greatly appreciated, and Frankfort is to be complimented on the fine showing made.

Tinley Memorial Day Parade and Exercises Outstanding Events

The first public Memorial Day parade and service ever held in Tinley Park was held Monday afternoon and was a wonderful affair. The Tinley Legion Post sponsored the affair. The parade formed in front of the home of Commander Charles Wallin. The parade was led by Frank Hoar, past commander of the Tinley Post and also an ex-gob.

Following him came the Legion color guard, then the new Tinley Park 50 piece Community Band, The Legionnaires, The Legion Auxiliary Unit, The Tinley Park R. N. A., the Volunteer Fire Department, the Tinley Park Baseball Team, the Hegewisch Legionnaires, Legion Auxiliary, Drum and Bugle corps and last, but not least was the Junior Garden Club. The buds carried Iris in the parade and these were gathered at the cemetery and placed at the foot of the grave of Wm. Garster in the Tinley Park cemetery by the Junior president, Miss Fern Fulton.

The parade marched down Kirchen street to Oak Park avenue then north to the north end of the village limits. Here the parade disbanded. The Legion and the Auxiliaries then went in autos to the Tinley Park cemetery. Here impressive services were held over the grave of Wm. Garster a world war veteran who died last June. Commander Wallin spoke at the grave following which Rev. Theodore Loeppert, pastor of the German and English M. E. churches delivered the address of the day and it was impressive.

The ladies of the Auxiliary placed flowers on the grave. The Legion firing squad fired three volleys over the grave and Mr. West sounded taps.

The new Tinley Park band who have been only organized a short time, made a big hit. They certainly can play well and are a big asset to Tinley Park.

The weather being ideal, a big crowd watched the parade and also attended the exercises at the cemetery.

Tinley demonstrated again that they can put it over when they undertake anything.

LOTTIE HOLMAN O'NEILL REMAINS PRIMARY VICTOR

The contest which attorney Joseph Keig of Lockport recently started in the circuit court of Will County to have the nomination of Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill of Downers Grove to the office of state representative set aside on the grounds that she had dissociated herself with the Republican party when she ran as an independent two years ago, was ruled against by Judge Frederick Hill last Thursday following arguments of attorney A. H. Krusemark, consul for Mrs. O'Neill. Attorney Krusemark won out on three major points.

The first point on which Judge Hill ruled favorably was that even though Mrs. O'Neill received nearly 100,000 votes when she was an independent candidate this fact did not mean that she had created a new party or had dissociated herself from the Republican party and was qualified to be a candidate of that party at the April primary.

The second point upheld by Judge Hill was that the time to protest the nomination of Mrs. O'Neill was before the primary and not after the voters had expressed their choice.

The third point was that in order to contest a case of this nature the proceedings must be under the quo warranto act and not by the petition formed as used in vote contest cases.

The final disposition of the case was made Thursday of this week when Judge Hill filed his decree.

Representative John Walker who also had been made a defendant in the proceedings, won out in his case about a week ago.

PLACE FLAGS ON SOLDIER GRAVES AT MOKENA

Memorial Day was very quietly observed at Mokena this year, there being no celebration of any kind. Rev. Mr. Cook of the Mokena M. E. church, members of the Boy Scouts and the editor placed flags on the soldiers graves. Mokena was the only town in this whole territory that did not put on a Memorial day program.

SYNOPSIS

Exhausted, ragged, and starving, a boy of about sixteen is found in the woods by a camping party. He has fled from his brutal father, Bat Morryson. Bat comes after him, but his new friends conceal him, Fed, and in clean clothes, the boy, who gives his name as Shad (Sheridan), is sent on his way to Canton, with a letter to Colonel Blake. The colonel, his wife, and their young daughter Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner.

Her hair was like spun gold, her eyes were as blue as violets, her voice was as musical and care free as the song sparrows. They were in that wistful stage of joyous, mutual discovery. The boy had found in her eyes a something which he could not forget.

She was wiser than he, for she knew nothing of that mysterious power in the eyes and form and graceful movements of a maiden which had produced the singular emotion now in his breast. Yet he had the soul of a poet, its love of beauty and its quick perception.

She told him of her school and her studies.

"Oh-h!" he said wistfully. "I'd like to go to school like you an' learn to talk good like you an' wear shiny shoes an' nice clothes. I want to be a gentleman like yer father and Mr. Converse."

She looked into his eyes, saying: "You are an interesting boy. I never saw anyone like you."

"I'd just like to stay here," he said. "If I had a thousand dollars I'd give it to you."

"What for?"

"I dunno. I'd just like to. That's the way I feel. I'm not exactly sure how it feels to be happy. I wouldn't wonder if I had got it."

This curious variety of love-making filled the most delightful day that Shad had known. That evening Colonel Blake returned. After supper the colonel told of his adventures in the wild West hunting Apaches and grizzly bears.

In the morning when the boy stood with Colonel Blake by the buggy which was to take them to town, Ruth called to him from the door. He went to her.

"Will you write me a letter?" she asked.

He promised to do so. She shook his hand and ran away into the house. She did not even say good-by.

Shad returned to the buggy blushing and smiling; his blood was flowing fast. The colonel laughed. Mrs. Blake kissed her husband and the lad. "They'll watch you in that store," she said. "Of course you'll work hard and be strictly honest. We love you and we want you to succeed."

Those were the best words that Shad Morryson had ever heard. He did not forget them. The first timber in the real structure of his life had found its place. Now for the first time happiness had come to him. He was no longer a lonely, discouraged, life-sick lad. He was at last fully alive.

In town the colonel bought for Shad a supply of shirts, socks and under-clothing and underwear.

The Blakes had much to say of a singular charm in the personality of the lad who had thus come to them. The colonel's inquiries soon led to the discovery of an interesting fact. The boy's mother was said to be a great, great-granddaughter of that brother of Napoleon Bonaparte who, late in the Eighteenth century, had had a hunting lodge in northern New York and who for a time had occupied the throne of Spain. It helped to explain the mental keenness of the boy and the noble shape of his head and the beauty of his countenance.

In his office Colonel Blake was not at all like the man Shad had met at the farmhouse. He was dignified. The rude Yankee dialect which he had used on the farm was dropped when he entered the office. Business was mostly a serious matter with him. In his view the farm was a joke, and there he played. A part of his play was the rude dialect of the countryside.

He took Shad to the inner office, and, calling a stenographer to his desk, dictated a letter of introduction for the boy to Mr. Ephraim Smithers of Amity Dam. When the letter was typed and signed he put it in Shad's hands, saying:

"Take a train to Ashfield at eleven. When you get there inquire your way to Amity Dam. It will be a five-mile walk for you. Have you money?"

"I've got twenty-one dollars in my pocket," was the proud answer of the boy. "Mr. Converse give it to me."

"Keep it a secret and hang on to it. Good-by."

The boy had almost two hours to spend before train time. He walked around the village, to him a wonderful place, with its town hall and houses and stores that looked large and important. He had never written a letter. He had seen only three or four letters in all his life.

"I don't know how I'd go to work to write a letter," he said to himself, "I'm too ignorant. I've got to learn something. I've got to."

The store windows interested him. It is significant that he should have stopped longest in front of a book store gazing wistfully at a lot of books. The merchant observed him and came out with the familiar query: "Is there anything we can do for you?"

"I want to learn a lot o' words I don't know."

Soon he had bought a pocket dictionary, a small diary, a lead pencil and a cheap watch. With these treasures he went to the station and began at once, while he was waiting, to study the dictionary. He arrived at Ashfield and learned his way to Amity Dam. The day was far spent. Mr. Smithers read the colonel's letter. He was a bearded solemn-looking man of middle age with a gentle voice that softened the price of dry goods and won the confidence of women.

"If You Go a Step Further, I'll Turn You Into Hay."

"I'll give you a trial," he said. "Ten dollars a month and board is all I can pay you."

Shad agreed to these terms. "Sit down here and rest yourself," said the merchant prince of Amity Dam. "We'll go home about nine o'clock."

After Shad rested a while, Mr. Smithers showed the boy his establishment from cellar to garret. It was the usual country store of that time. Mr. Smithers wrote out for the boy a list of his many duties. Before they went home the merchant gave Shad a lesson in wrapping packages.

Mr. Smithers lived in a frame house near the store. His wife was a kindly gray-haired woman. With a candle in her hand, she led the boy to his room above stairs, where she lighted a small lamp and put it on a little table at his bedside. Two books lay on the table. One of them was the story of Toby Tyler. He had learned to read, but he had never read any book save the First and Second Readers. Before he slept he made this entry in his diary:

"I love Kurnel Blake an' all his folks. Walked from Ashfield to the store in an hour and 20 minits."

It was an entry of greater importance than he knew.

The days were filled with joy for the homeless lad. He was quick to learn. He enjoyed his work.

One day a tall brown-bearded man entered the store. Shad was alone talking with a boy known in the neighborhood as Bony. The man had a serious face and a brisk manner.

"Hurry up, boy, and give me a pound of the best tea," he commanded.

He paid for his purchase and hurried out of the store. This stranger was not like any other person Shad had seen in Amity Dam.

"Who is that?" he inquired of Bony. "That, sir? It's Cyrus Doolittle. We call him 'Cyrus the Great.' He hurries more an' does less than any man I know of. He's a politician. He's the great man of the town."

Bony was a born satirist. A slim hatchet-faced lad with a sense of humor, he worked at odd jobs here and there.

"If you want to know more about Cy Doolittle, you ask ol' Bumpy Brown 'bout him."

"Who is Bumpy Brown?" Shad asked.

"He's the best dammer in Amity Dam. Now an' then he takes a holiday an' sets down comfortable an' spends it cussin' Cy Doolittle."

This somewhat fanciful introduction being ended, the boy endeavored to restrain his imagination with no great success, while he presented the outstanding facts in Mr. Brown's biography.

"Bumpy is an old feller with a wooden leg who lives 'bout three miles away in the cur'usset shack you ever see. It's on the shore of the river. As a liar he'd take the first premium at the county fair. Nobody believes him."

"Don't he like Mr. Doolittle?"

"Hates the ground he walks on. He'll start from Piermont sober and, with no help that anyone knows of but the scenery, he'll be drunk when he gets here. He never carries a bottle. It's a mystery. He'll set an' lean ag'in the telephone pole opposite this store an' laugh an' cuss Cy till the cows come home. When he thinks he's ruined Cy enough he'll limp off down the road. He can walk as fast as anybody."

The boys laughed.

That day Shad received a package of books from Colonel Blake: school books and some tales by Oliver Optic. The kindly Mrs. Smithers began to help him evenings with his grammar and arithmetic. He wrote many letters to Ruth Blake. They did not satisfy him. They violated a hidden growing sense of artistic propriety. He studied and burned them.

On a September afternoon Shad got leave to go with Bony to the fair in Ashfield. There Shad came face to face with the sister of his stepmother—a young French woman of the name of Batiste. Shad treated her to lemonade and she promised not to tell anyone that she had seen him.

One day Bumpy Brown came out and sat in his accustomed place on the corner at Amity Dam. Shad went out of the store for a look at him. Old Bumpy was in an advanced stage of inebriation. He was muttering, "Rascal!" "Dirty sneak!" and like words of bitter scorn. As Shad approached the old man looked at him and nodded with a smile. He was about sixty years of age.

"Hello, boy!" he said.

Bumpy Brown was not often drunk. Three or four times in a summer he went on a spree and when that happened he came always to Amity Dam. He was then so harmless and quiet that no one interfered with his pleasure.

Shad was deeply interested in the curious man. He had to hurry back to the store. As he left, the drunkard called out laughingly: "And there lay round upon the ground great heaps of so'gers."

Bumpy's assessment of Doolittle did not agree with the sentiment of the countryside. While people thought Doolittle a showy man, not overfond of work, who was deeply indebted to the bounty of his father-in-law, with whom he lived, everybody respected him or seemed to, everybody but Bumpy Brown and the boy Bony Squares. However, Bony was nobody. He came from nowhere. Moreover, he was down on the whole village. Mr. Doolittle was the friend of every great man in the county. He was a supporter of the church. He spoke at political meetings.

That evening Shad was probably the happiest boy in the county. The mail had brought him a letter from Ruth Blake. Three times he had read it and then had put the treasure very carefully in his pocket. Often he touched it with his fingers. Ruth and her mother and father had invited him to their home. He felt like a person of importance. Looking at the letter had brought back to him the singular elation which had come from looking into her eyes, from the feel of her hand. Shad was getting along. He had better manners. He had studied the grammar and dictionary. He had shaken off his rude dialect. He had not yet learned how difficult it is to shake off the thing called background. History is often like a wolf on the trail of a stag.

Shad and Bony were alone in the store that evening. Suddenly the door opened. Shad's heart sank within him when he saw his father, Bat Morryson, and the village constable approaching him.

"You d—d runaway! At last I've found you!" said Bat. "What are you doing here?"

"Working," Shad answered.

"You're going to come with me, I've got work enough for you at home."

"Is he your father?" the constable asked.

"Yes, sir."

"Then I expect you'll have to go with him."

Bony picked up a pitchfork from a stack of tools.

"I'll get my coat and hat," said Shad as he hurried into the rear room.

Bat started after his son. Bony halted him with the pitchfork saying, "If you go a step further, I'll turn you into hay."

The Five Ages of Man

"Daddy, I know how to do everything," said the little boy of five.

"What I don't know isn't worth knowing," said the young man of twenty.

"Well, anyway, I do know my own trade A to Z," said the man of thirty-five.

"There are very few matters, I am sorry to say, that I am really quite sure about," said the man of fifty.

"I have learned a bit, but not much since I was born; but knowledge is so vast that one cannot become wise in a short lifetime," said the man of sixty-five.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Illinois Press Association, Chicago

Illinois state fair premiums for 1932, to be paid chiefly from funds collected at the licensed race tracks, will be the highest on record, and expenses paid from the general revenue will be kept down to the level, or about 40 per cent below the cost in 1928. The premium offerings will total $218,573, an amount believed to be the highest to be offered by any agricultural fair in the United States this year.

The new George Washington quarter dollar, to be issued by the United States treasury as a feature of the nation-wide George Washington Bicentennial celebration, will be coined in large enough quantities to satisfy a normal demand, officials of the treasury have informed the United States George Washington Bicentennial commission. It is expected that the quarter will be ready for distribution before June 1.

General health conditions will improve steadily from now until September if a forecast may be ventured on the basis of past experience, the Illinois department of public health has announced. Epidemic diseases will trail off to minimum prevalence levels, the statement said. Mortality from chronic diseases will decline, individuals and communities will enjoy their highest levels of physical health.

Milton E. Jones, general manager of the Illinois state fair will have four national exhibits united with the annual state agricultural exposition this year which will take place from August 20 to 27 inclusive. This will place it in the front ranks of fairs on the North American continent. The shows will be: National Swine show, National Hereford Cattle exhibit, National Shorthorn Cattle exhibit and the Regional Jersey Cattle show.

Approximately 11,000 Illinois union miners are now working in various mines in all sections of the state under separate agreements with individual owners, according to a statement which has been issued at the district union headquarters at Springfield. With the expiration of the old wage scale for union miners on March 31, many men were thrown out of work and have been out of employment pending an agreement between operators and mine officials on a new scale. More than 100 mines throughout the state are said to be operating under tentative agreements with the miners' union.

The thirty-third annual meeting of the Illinois State Historical society was held in Springfield on May 12 and 13.

Election judges may use stickers or write on the ballot the name of the person when the name is furnished after the ballots have been printed, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has written State's Attorney E. J. Coyle of Greene county, but there is no law which allows a candidate or a voter to use stickers on the ballot. The attorney general's opinion rules out the election of an office-seeker in that county who circulated stickers to the voters, a sufficient number of whom pasted them on the ballot so that he received more votes than a candidate whose name was printed on the ballot.

The spring season is the proper time to think of beautification of home, business and public sites. Trees, shrubbery and flowers, planted now, can mean much toward attractiveness of streets, yards and municipal grounds in any city or town in Illinois.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has sent word of his acceptance of Chicago's invitation to review the Memorial day parade in that city. For the first time, the Civil war veterans will ride in automobiles this year, breaking the old tradition of a Memorial day march.

Assessed valuations of Illinois farm lands and improvements were cut more than $286,000,000 in 1931, the Illinois Agricultural association reports as the result of a survey just completed by John C. Watson, director of taxation. This means that the total assessed values of farm lands in the state, excluding Cook county, are now approximately 15.9 per cent below 1930 values, it is claimed. Every county in the state except six received reductions, ranging from less than 1 per cent to as much as 37 per cent. The 1931 reductions, together with others brought about during recent years have cut more than $6,500,000 from the tax bill of Illinois farmers since 1922, the association says.

During past weeks, Chicago has sent down a sizable sum in taxes for 1930, and in June, cash will begin to come in from the annual franchise taxes and the Illinois Central railroad. Just recently, $300,000 of anticipation notes to pay interest on soldiers' compensation bonds have been retired.

The Commercial Bank of Champaign has reopened for business following approvals from the state auditor's office of the work of the reorganization committee.

The eighty-second annual meeting of the Illinois State Medical society was held in Springfield on May 17, 18 and 19, as well as the annual convention of the woman's auxiliary group.

State tax anticipation notes totaling $2,500,000 have been issued by the state of Illinois to meet general expenses and the money was borrowed from the gasoline tax fund, bringing borrowings from the gas tax fund up to $9,800,000 for general revenue expenses. The action was authorized by the governor, auditor and treasurer.

"Banking in the reconstruction period" will be the theme of the program for the forty-second annual convention of the Illinois Bankers association which is to be held in Springfield on May 23, 24, and 25, according to an announcement issued by M. A. Graettinger, executive vice president of that organization.

The state department of public works and buildings has announced that $2,249,814 is now available as state-aid road refunds to 55 Illinois counties. Half of the appropriation for this purpose in 1931 and 1932, $2,500,000, or $1,250,000 was allotted last September 24, but the counties have absorbed only $250,185.90 of this amount. The county clerks and county superintendents of highways in the participating counties have received from Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer, an explanation of the law setting forth the manner in which it may be utilized, and the amount available to each county.

The 1932 edition of the official road map of Illinois, issued by the state department of public works and buildings through its division of highways, is now in circulation. Copies of the current issue of the map show the status of the highway system as of March 1, this year, with a total of 8,360.95 miles of state bond issue roads and 2,406.87 miles of state aid routes.

Plans for the Illinois exhibit at Chicago's 1933 World's fair were outlined at the first meeting of the full official Illinois World's fair committee at a recent meeting in Chicago. The meeting, with Gov. Louis L. Emmerson acting as chairman, convened in the administration building at the World's fair grounds. The state legislature has appropriated $350,000 for the exhibit.

Paupers obtaining aid from townships in Illinois may own and operate automobiles, Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom has advised county officials although he cautioned overseers that automobiles should be used for the purpose of seeking employment or other necessary duties and not for pleasure. In the same opinion, Carlstrom ruled that Illinois statutes do not require that the names of all paupers receiving township aid be published in newspapers.

Illinois women will rejoice at the news of a most fitting memorial being inaugurated in honor of Mrs. H. M. Dunlap who devoted a lifetime of service to the cause of womanhood and home. The state fair school of domestic science was founded largely through her efforts some 34 years ago. Through the co-operation of the Illinois Farmers' institute and department of household science, the department of agriculture and the state fair board, her long dreamed-of school for older women will become a reality. The same faculty which serves the state fair school of domestic science will also have charge of this new school to be known as "The Nora Dunlap School for Homemakers." Its first session will be held August 2-9 in the Louis L. Emmerson building on the fair grounds. Application blanks and further information may be secured by writing Mrs. Anita Shamel, State-house, Springfield.

The recessed state convention of the Republican organization will be held at the state arsenal in Springfield on Friday, May 27, starting at 10 a. m.

Whether Illinois telephone users should continue to pay a surcharge for the privilege of using a French, or cradle, telephone will be investigated by the Illinois Commerce commission. The commission states that sufficient data has accumulated as to maintenance costs so that an investigation as to whether the extra charge should either be reduced or eliminated is timely.

Country-wide campaigns against diphtheria have been successfully prosecuted during the last few months in DeWitt, Ford, Iroquois, Jasper and Morgan counties, Dr. Andy Hall, director of the state department of public health, has announced. These special activities included treatment of school and pre-school children with toxoid.

Thirty-five million pike fry hatched from 250 quarts of pike eggs will be released soon by the department of conservation. These baby game fish are to be placed in the lakes and rivers of northern Illinois by this department, Director Ralph F. Bradford, its director, states.

Today's Sermon

Lesson for June 5

JOSEPH THE WORKER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 41:46-57.
GOLDEN TEXT—Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Making Dreams Come True.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Joseph the Worker.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Rewards of Faithfulness.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Religious Value of Work.

Joseph was not a self-made man, but a God-made man. His masters always attributed the quality of his character and the success of his work to the fact that the Lord was with him.

1. Joseph Serving Potiphar (39:1-20).

1. Sold to the Ishmaelites (37:28). Joseph was sent by his father to his brethren on an errand of mercy. At the sight of Joseph the murderous envy of his brethren was stirred up. They first proposed to kill him in order to prevent his dreams from coming true. Finally the prudent suggestion of Judah to sell him prevailed, and he was carried to Egypt and sold as a slave to Potiphar.

2. His prosperity while a slave in Potiphar's house (39:2-6). This prosperity consisted of:

a. Being accorded the privilege of Potiphar's house. By "house" is meant his private residence instead of fields or public buildings.

b. He became Potiphar's personal attendant (v. 4).

c. He was made overseer of Potiphar's house (v. 4).

d. He brought prosperity to Potiphar (v. 5). The Lord blessed Potiphar for Joseph's sake.

e. He possessed an attractive personality (v. 6). His fine physique and commanding personality were gifts from God.

3. His temptation (vv. 7-20). Potiphar's wife became infatuated with this handsome slave. He resisted her, unwilling to sin against his master and his God.

4. Joseph Serving in Prison (39:21-40:23).

1. Overseeing the prisoners (39:21-40:4). Being defeated in her wicked purpose, Potiphar's wife accused Joseph falsely. Potiphar must not have really believed his wife's story, or he would have put Joseph to death. He imprisoned him, the least that was possible under the circumstances.

a. The Lord gave him favor in the sight of the keeper of the prison (v. 21). This keeper was none other than Potiphar himself (40:3, cf. 39:1).

b. He was given charge of the prisoners (v. 22). Potiphar knew Joseph's ability and faithfulness, therefore gave him employment of the most important kind.

c. The Lord made him to be prosperous (v. 23). Joseph's success was due to the hand of God upon him.

2. Interpreting the dreams of the butler and the baker (40:5-23). These were two very important officers in Pharaoh's court, their business being to provide the drink and food of the ruler and his household. These officers had disturbing dreams. He interpreted their dreams. His interpretation was favorable to the butler, who gave his pledge to Joseph that he would intercede with Pharaoh for him when he was set free.

3. Joseph Serving Pharaoh (41:1-57).

1. Interpreting his dream (vv. 1-32). For two full years Joseph remained in prison, forgotten by the butler. Pharaoh's dream brought to Joseph a great opportunity. The failure of the dream caused the chief butler to remember what Joseph had done for him. Joseph was brought out of prison and made known to Pharaoh that it meant seven years of plenty followed by seven years of famine.

2. Advising Pharaoh (vv. 33-36). He suggested to him that part of the produce be stored during the years of plenty. The plan appealed to Pharaoh, and he invested Joseph with authority to execute it.

3. Preparing for famine (vv. 37-52). During the seven years the earth brought forth plentifully. Clothed with royal authority, Joseph went over all the country and gathered and stored the food in all the cities.

4. Selling food to the needy (vv. 53-57).

a. At last the years of fruitfulness ended and then began famine in all the lands (v. 53).

b. Bread was to be found in Egypt only (v. 54). This was the result of Joseph's foresight and preparation.

c. Distribution in the hands of Joseph (vv. 55-57). He opened the storehouses and sold food unto the Egyptians and foreigners.

Sure Remedy

There is no surer remedy for desponding weakness than, when we have done our own parts, to commit all cheerfully, for the rest, to the good pleasure of heaven. — Sir Roger L'Estrange.

God's Demands

God demands of us that though we lose health and wealth we do not lose faith in him, and though we have abundantly of both that we do not lose sight of him.

NOW thoroughly aroused, Governor Dinwiddie moved to resist French aggression. Washington was offered full command but, pleading lack of experience in so serious a matter he accepted service as second in command under Colonel Frye and left Alexandria on April 2, 1754 under orders to build roads for the advancing artillery. Destiny's messenger, in the guise of a military courier, soon handed the courageous youth greater responsibilities.

BEHIND bolted doors in this cabin, now preserved in Riverside Park, at Cumberland, Maryland, Washington sought his own counsel upon hearing that the half constructed fort at the Forks had been captured by the French. With the sudden death of Colonel Frye, leadership had again fallen to this apt pupil in the school of events.

LORD FAIRFAX WRITES on the BLESSINGS OF THE PIPE

CRISES were now becoming the stepping-stones to greatness for this resolute youth. Lord Fairfax, always present in body or spirit as grave hours approached, sent this counsel:

"I would that you smoked a pipe. It confers great equanimity in times of doubt, and the Indians hold it to be helpful in council; for while a man smokes he cannot discourse, and thus must needs obtain time for sober reflection. Indeed, my dear George, when I reflect upon the many statues of worthless kings and the monuments to scoundrels in graveyards where the dead lie and the living lie about them, I am inclined to set up a fine memorial at Greenway Court to the unknown Indian who invented this blessing of the Pipe. He must have been a great genius."

Tinley Park Baseball News

Tinley took another licking at the hands of Palos Park last Sunday by a score of 10 to 2.

The game was loosely played, 8 errors being charged to Tinley Park. The boys found the pitching of Thomas of Palos too much for them and only compiled 4 safe blows from his offerings.

Palos scored 8 runs in 3 innings on Breitbarth, who was relieved at the end of the 3rd and McCann held the invaders to two runs, both unearned, for the remainder of the game.

The Tinley boys also kicked away a good game with Mokena on Monday by a score of 6 to 2.

The fast Lemont Swedes come to Tinley next Sunday and the odds are in their favor, unless Tinley snaps out of it with a better line of defense and a better batting eye.

The boys are trying and some credit must be given them for this effort.

Some new faces will be seen in next Sunday's game, so you fans who enjoy a ball game, keep right on coming and make a lot of noise for Tinley.

Catcher Lehman, who was spiked at the plate in Monday's game, was painfully but not seriously hurt, and will be seen in next Sunday's lineup.

My Mother's Husband

I've known him as long
As my mem'ry dates back.
And there's not a good trait,
That he does lack.

He's worked and he's saved
For what we've got
And we're proud of him for it,
Though it's not a lot.

All of us love him,
And so I am glad
That he's my mother's husband,
And my Darling Dad.

Milk Price to

Farmers Reduced
To $1.85 Cwt.

After a careful investigation during the past three weeks, Dr. Clyde L. King, arbitrator on the Chicago milk market, announced May 31 that the price of milk to the farmers would have to be reduced to $1.85, a drop of 16 cents per cwt.

The statement made by Dr. King follows: "Because of market conditions the price of milk to the farmers will be $1.85 per cwt. This drop the dealers pass on to consumers by lowering the price on pints from 8 to 7 cents. This is as low a price as either farmers or dealers can now live under with full consideration of the disastrous price level now effective throughout the country."

Of the two brothers of Peter, one settled in Philadelphia and became wealthy in the tanning business, one of his grandsons was chief of police of Washington for many years.

The other brother settled in Dutchess County, New York. He also was in the tanning business. One of his sons or grandsons became a member of Congress for one term.

Peter Sylvester served in Congress but I do not know for how long.

On September 25, 1789 a bill was passed by Congress asking President Washington to issue a Thanksgiving proclamation, the committee appointed to wait upon the President was Senators Ralph Izard, of South Carolina, Wm. S. Johnson, of Connecticut, and Representatives Eliza Boudinot of New Jersey, Roger Sherman, of Connecticut, and Peter Sylvester, of New York.

Seven children were born to Peter and Nancy Sylvester, six reaching maturity. Ruben, my father was the youngest. He was bound out at the age of seven to a shoemaker. He received no education. Ran away and was in the Black Hawk war, was discharged from the army at Buffalo, New York. He walked all the way to New York city where he later met Lucretia Shelley and they were married in 1839. Mother who was well educated (for those days) taught father to read and write and he became one of the best politically informed men in our locality. He was the first Republican in the town of Bedford New York.

BACK-TRACKING an OLD TRAIL

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

SOME time this summer a gray-haired New Yorker will be setting out upon a romantic journey. For William H. Jackson, eighty-nine-year-old "pioneer photographer" and at present research secretary of the Oregon Trail Memorial association, is going to back-track on the trail of youth. Here is the way he told about it recently in announcing his plans:

"About the end of June the snows of the Rocky mountains will subside for another season and the roads will again be passable. Then I will start out on my annual trek over the Old Trail. You know, I first went over the trail back in the days of the Indians and the covered wagons with my little mule, 'Hypo,' for company. I'll use an auto this trip. It won't be much like an ox-cart for seeing the country, but it's a bit better than the train. And I guess a man who could 'bullwhack' can handle a steering wheel on the Old Trail, even if he is close to four-score and ten. This time I shall go alone. But I probably will pick up various friends along the way. . . . I have been interested in our project of placing monuments and markers at the historic spots on the Trail. Last year we placed 100 from the Missouri river to the Pacific coast, and 60 more on the pony express trail of '61."

Indebted as the posterity of America will be to this association and its active gray-haired research secretary for their work in marking historic spots on the famous "highway of a westward-faring nation," the Oregon Trail, posterity is even more indebted to the work which William H. Jackson did many years ago with his camera in preserving scenes which soon passed away forever and for the work which he is still doing in preserving more of those scenes through another medium—that of brush and canvas.

Jackson was born in Keesville, a little town in the Adirondacks of New York state, in 1843. The traveling which was to characterize his whole life started early, for when he was just one year old his family moved to Georgia. They soon returned to New York but so strong was the wanderlust which became inbred in young Jackson that he refused to go to school after he had finished the eighth grade. At the age of fifteen he had only one desire and that was to draw and paint. He came naturally by that ambition, for his mother was a landscape artist and his father an experimenter in the making of daguerotypes, the forerunners of modern photography.

"Various kinds of picture making occupied my time for a while," says Mr. Jackson. "I made family portraits; I painted landscapes on window screens, a fashion in those early days; and I painted a row of big jars as part of the scenery for a play about 'The Forty Thieves' of the Old Arabian Nights. The chief scenic artist for the local theaters gave me an approving slap on the back for my good drawing in this first attempt at scene painting."

"None of these beginnings brought in much money but they were good practice. To this hit-and-miss art training was added a few months work in the studio of a portrait painter which improved my technique somewhat."

But the opening of the Civil war put an end to this work and when Lincoln issued his call for "300,000 more" Jackson joined the Rutland Light Guards, later entering Company K, Twelfth Vermont Infantry which with other troops became the Second Vermont Brigade. As soon as Jackson's commander discovered his talent for drawing he was detailed to sketch maps of picket lines along Bull Run so at the age of nineteen he held an important and dangerous post in the Union army. After the war was over, Jackson returned to his home in the Adirondacks where for some time he was busy making photographs of the local heroes home from the war. At that time he earned what was considered a munificent sum, $25 a week. But soon the wonderlust asserted itself again and he decided to go west. He headed for Detroit but got only as far as Chicago and then worked his way on to Detroit by painting signs, teaching the art of coloring photographs and picking up other odd jobs. Eventually he got as far west as St. Joseph, Mo.

Here he secured a job of driving ox teams from Nebraska to Montana, "bull whacking" as it was called, for the wages of $20 a month. For a year, 1866 to 1867, he was engaged in this work, freighting from Nebraska City on the Missouri via Fort Kearney, Julesburg, Fort Laramie and South Pass and to the valley of the Great Salt lake.

The following quotation from a letter which young Jackson wrote to his parents dated "Great Salt Lake City, October 30, 1866," is a graphic pen picture of the life of a bullwhacker in those days. "The program of a day's work will give you some idea of the kind of a life we have been leading. In the morning, just as day is breaking and when sleep lies heaviest upon us, the night watch makes the rounds, pounding on the wagons and shouting 'Roll out! Roll out! The bulls are coming.'"

"Shouldering one of the heavy yokes I begin looking for my old off-wheeler. It is hardly light enough yet to distinguish objects clearly and I have some difficulty at first in telling one ox from another. But I finally get my last pointer yoked and having previously put the wheelers onto the tongue I drive around the other five yoke, connected with chains, and hitch them on ahead. I am ready to pull out, usually just as the sun is appearing above the horizon. . . ."

"About ten o'clock the train is corralled, un-yoking quickly done, and the cattle turned out to graze in charge of herders, and we proceed at once to get breakfast. The train is divided into four messes, the men taking turns at the various duties. This is frequently accompanied by a good deal of contentious wrangling because there are always shirkers that always fail to do their share of the work. The details bring the wood and water. The cooks for the time being bake bread in the big dutch oven, make two or three gallons of coffee, slice up half a side of bacon, and it hardly necessary to shout 'Grub pile!' for the whole mess is right there, impatiently waiting. Each one helps himself with tin cup and plate and retreating to the shady side of a wagon experiences for a brief half hour complete satisfaction."

"The afternoon drive sometimes brings us into camp so that it is quite late by the time we get supper. One of the greatest difficulties in cooking is the matter of providing fuel. Wood is scarce and along most of our route entirely lacking. The only substitute available is buffalo chips. It makes an excellent fire for cooking purposes when entirely dry, but when wet is the meanest stuff imaginable to get along with, trying the patience of the cooks to the utmost. . . ."

"My heavy suppers with the great quantities of strong coffee that I drink just before going to bed frequently result in dreams that verge on nightmares. At first, when the novelty of my adventure with its attendant work and worry was uppermost in my mind I had lurid dreams almost every night and invariably they related to my team of bulls. Sometimes I imagined them out of control and about to plunge over a great precipice. Wild with terror I would tumble out of my wagon in my desperate attempt to head them off from destruction, only to be yanked back by my bed fellow or brought to my senses by the night watchman. Billy and I slept on a buffalo robe with long shaggy hair. On one occasion I began tugging at this robe so violently that I nearly threw Billy out of the wagon. Of course he was in a high dudgeon and wanted to know what I thought I was doing; dreaming still, I replied 'I can't get my confounded leaders' heads around!'"

After a year of this work, young Jackson decided he wanted to start up in the business which he knew best so he went to Omaha and in 1868 he and his brother, who had come on from the East, set up a shop with a shingle over the door which read "Jackson Brothers, Photographers." This was the period when Omaha was booming with activities connected with the building of the Union Pacific railroad. Young Mr. Jackson saw in the starting of the railroad a wonderful chance for pictures. So he left the business in the hands of his brother and started out to record what was happening.

2. W. H. Jackson in the days of his youth. 3. W. H. Jackson (left), eighty-nine years old, "the pioneer photographer," greets another notable, Daniel Carter Beard (right), veteran Boy Scout leader, when they met at the National Pioneer dinner given by the Oregon Trail Memorial association in tribute to the western pioneers on December 29, 1930, the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Ezra Meeker, founder of the association.

"In those days," says Mr. Jackson, "photography was different than it is today. The pioneer photographer of that time had to be something of a chemist, artist and mechanic all put together. When he wanted to take pictures on the road he had to carry chemicals, trays, glasses and what not, for each plate had to be prepared on the spot for every exposure. So when I started out from Omaha in 1868 I was equipped with a complete portable outfit for developing pictures en route."

Dr. F. V. Hayden head of the United States geological survey of the territories, organized to obtain definite information about those vast regions opened to the settlers by the new railroad, saw the pictures which Mr. Jackson took on that trip. He liked them so much he decided he must have Jackson along on his own surveying trip which he was slated to take along the old Oregon Trail, across Wyoming and back by the Overland Stage route. Thus it came about that William H. Jackson was the first man to make photographs of the marvels of the old Oregon Trail country.

Although he was appointed official photographer of the Hayden survey, he received no salary, but his equipment was provided and he was permitted to keep all negatives he made, for his own use. Most of his photographic supplies he carried in the ambulance which accompanied the party, but he also was provided with a little donkey which he named "Hypo." "Hypo" carried his working kit.

This survey of Doctor Hayden's started in August, 1870, and from Independence Rock followed the old Oregon Mormon trail along the Sweetwater river. Returning, it followed the old Overland Stage route across southern Wyoming and at Fort Saunders disbanded for the season.

So pleased were Washington officials with the pictures taken on this first survey that they appointed Jackson to accompany future surveys as photographer and for ten years he remained with Doctor Hayden in this capacity. In 1871, he took pictures of Yellowstone. He was the first to make photographs of the marvels of this country and his pictures, as well as the discoveries of, and specimens collected, by Doctor Hayden and his party, played an important part in the creation of the Yellowstone National park in 1872. The last expedition of the Hayden Geological survey to the Rocky mountain region was made in 1878, the present United States geological survey then being instituted. Mr. Jackson accompanied this final expedition.

Having completed his work as a pioneer photographer, Mr. Jackson eventually settled in Detroit and took up photography as a business. For 25 years he was connected with the Detroit Publishing company, retiring from that company a few years ago. Since that time he has been busy writing about his experiences in the old days, making paintings from his notes and sketches and promoting the work of the Oregon Trail Memorial association. And this summer he will climax his career by one more trip over that historic route where he was once a bullwhacker and the first and outstanding member of his profession—that of photographer of the Wild West.

Outlines Six Steps for Land Use Plan

"Much lower prices for what he sells, higher prices for what he buys, and higher taxes—these are the upper and nether millstones which are slowly grinding the life out of rural America," said Prof. M. L. Wilson of Montana State College in a radio address, over an NBC network in the program of the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education. "Fortunately, there is a way out," Wilson stated, "but the way demands a reversal of the basic land policy of the nation."

The speaker presented six steps in a program for land utilization.

First in the list of six fundamentals suggested by Professor Wilson is the repeal of the Homestead Act and the enactment of a new national land policy bill which, he pointed out, is essential because there is no more land in the public domain suitable for farming and home building.

"Secondly, each state should classify its lands, develop a state-wide land use plan and institute a program of action," Professor Wilson advised. The third step is that poor land, as determined by land utilization studies, should be taken out of production.

Additional steps in the plan presented by Professor Wilson include the modification of land taxes and reorganization of local government; the withdrawal of poor lands from production to solve the surplus problem. Suggesting how this might be carried out, he explained the "Domestic Allotment Plan" which calls for the issuance of certain allotments to farmers to grow the kinds of crops they have been growing, the farmer to receive tariff protection on the allotted acres. Finally, Wilson recommended part time farming and the decentralization of industry.

To prevent men who are farming unsuitable land from joining the ranks of the unemployed, Professor Wilson stated that industry must adopt a new policy coupling industry with small farm agriculture. Small farms, located near industrial plants, he said, would not produce the great food staples of which there is a surplus.

Ingenious Camouflage

A French lieutenant who served through the World war recently demonstrated in Paris the advantages of his new camouflage invention whereby, in a short time, a pedestrian or soldier can be transformed into a shock of grain, heap of leaves, a bunch of newspapers, tree stump or what not while walking. His name is Georges Felix, and his invention consists of a kind of a net that weighs less than a pound, and when not used for camouflage purposes can be employed in numerous other ways.

Miracle Plays in Streets

Clergymen of England are proposing that, to bring religion to the man in the street who does not bother to go to church, there be revived the old idea of the religious or miracle plays, and produce them on city streets. They suggest that the plays could be staged on trucks placed at the end of blind streets. The sponsors of the ideas are certain that the productions would attract crowds, but their possible reaction is a question being discussed. Colonel Hamilton of the Salvation army told the Religious Drama society that slum audiences would have to be educated, as he was not certain as to what they would do. The success of open-air Shakespearean performances has encouraged the miracle-play backers and the idea may be tried this summer.

Radio Experts Not Needed

Anyone would be able to send dot and dash code messages by radio or telegraph by using an invention reported perfected by Jacques Detruiseux, French inventor. Obviating the need of a trained operator, a series of knobs turned as on a radio receiving set would be turned to spell out the messages. The letters are indicated at points on the knob, and the dot-dash transmission is automatic.

TINLEY PARK

The Tinley Park Juniors, backed by the Tinley Park Baseball Association, won their 3rd straight game in four starts by defeating the Midlothian Cardinals 4 to 2.

After losing their first game on Sunday May 22nd to the fast Chicago Cardinals 8 to 11, the kids took one second game of a double header from Coopers Grove 15 to 4. Ginden set Cooper boys down in short order, striking out ten of the twelve batters who faced him in the last four innings.

The holidays proved to be very successful for the Tinley boys. On Sunday Devin stopped Richton in a shut out game 15 to 0. Gotham then decorated Midlothian with a 4 to 2 beating on Decoration day.

These boys will bear watching as they are the coming ball players of Tinley Park. Although they are young and wild, they make up in their speed and determination to play. The boys are alert every minute of the time, as the game last Sunday showed. Getting 4 runs on 8 hits to Midlothian's 2 runs on 11 hits shows what can be done with a team that plays "heads up" all the time.

Watch these boys go. In a few weeks we will be out for the scalps of the Tinley Park "Big Team". The challenge is on.

On Sunday, June 5th the Poncis will travel to Goeleville seeking their fourth straight victory. Game called for 2 p. m.

Sunday, June 12th the kids will play a double header with Mokena and Foster Park respectively on the local field. Games will start 1 and 3 p. m.

THE STOECKMAN FAMILY

Big Military Tournament Coming To Soldiers Field

What is regarded as the most spectacular military demonstration ever held in the middlewest, with virtually every arm of the government's combat forces participating, will be held at Soldier Field, Chicago, June 24 to July 4, inclusive.

The occasion will be the George Washington Bicentennial Military Tournament, under the direction of Major General Frank Parker, commander of the Sixth Corps Area.

The proceeds from the tournament, after expenses, will be divided equally between the Army Relief Society and the Joint Emergency Relief fund.

High officers of the army, navy and other branches of the service. Governor Emmerson, Mayor Cermak and other high public officials will take part in the program.

For the period of the tournament Soldier Field will be a military encampment with infantry, artillery, cavalry, aviation, tank corps and other regular service units present.

Every evening will witness picturesque demonstrations by the combat forces and colorful pageants. There will be reproductions of various famous engagements of past wars as well as other events of historical and patriotic significance.

Among the events are Washington at Valley Forge; the capture of Cantigny by the American troops in the World War; the Fort Dearborn Massacre; Mount Vernon and Yorktown; the John Paul Jones victory on the Bon Homme Richard; Washington and Lafayette; Von Steuben Pulaski and General Sullivan; airplane battles and bombings by squadrons of planes; cavalry charges and fancy riding exhibitions; infantry charges; artillery in action; tanks lumber into action; a grand review of the combat forces; dances and music by groups representing various foreign nations and a colorful fireworks display of magnitude rarely seen.

More than 100 service airplanes will take part in the tournament. They will demonstrate the latest developments in aerial warfare and in addition, a group of daredevil pilots will stage a series of thrilling stunt formations.

The American Legion, Gold Star Mothers, and a large number of foreign language groups, fraternal organizations, women's organizations and others will participate in the tournament.

In addition there will be a dramatized exhibit portraying the life and habits of the colonial period in contrast with today. These exhibits will cover all essential phases of colonial and modern life, covering among other things, food, clothing, light, heat, power, communication and agriculture.

"This patriotic production will redound to the credit of Chicago," General Parker stated, "because it will be the greatest single celebration of the birth of the United States in this country. It should win national recognition by virtue of its dimensions and inherent interest."

"At this time there appear to be many forces at work spreading propaganda subversive to faith in our form of government. I am confident that a big spectacle to focus attention on our history and the patriotism and sacrifices that made our national development possible will be particularly appropriate in times like these when our country needs to study anew the qualities of determination, unselfishness and leadership that marked the career of Washington."

Will Co. Ex-Service

Men Organize New

Republican Club

The Will County Ex-Service Men's Republican Club held a pre-organization meeting Tuesday evening the first of June to consider the charter which has been issued to them by the Secretary of State Wm. Stratton. Approximately fifty men attended this meeting and it was agreed to hold another meeting next Tuesday, June 7th at which time the organization would be perfected and the officers and board of directors elected.

Eligibility in this club is limited to residents of Will County who have served with the armed forces of the United States and have been honorably discharged or to those who are now serving. Anyone having served with the armed forces of other nations but who now is a naturalized citizen of the United States and a resident of Will County is also eligible.

The purpose of this club is to further the cause of the Republican party in general and in Will County in particular, to sponsor better understanding and a more friendly feeling between the ex-service candidates and the candidates who are not ex-service men, the idea being to back any good Republican as we realize that there are and will be many candidates for office who by virtue of age alone at the time of national distress were not in a position to serve their country.

All those of Will County who are eligible for membership are urged to attend this organization meeting June 7th at 8 p. m. at the Carlson Funeral Home, Benton and Herkimer streets, Joliet, Illinois.

Dr. W. R. Fletcher has been chosen as temporary chairman and Gustaf Carlson as temporary secretary. The new officers as elected at the organization meeting, June 7th will take their chairs the same evening.
